An introductory review by E. Schatzman, to whom this volume is dedicated, is followed by three sections: observational facts (surface abundances, stellar rotation, loss of mass and angular momentum, etc.), physical knowledge (mass transport and mixing by waves, turbulent transport, fast dynamo action, etc.), and the interpretation of observations.

tribute to mixing in stellar interiors as soon as some energy from the shear is available. In that respect we recall that the Richardson criterion imposes some threshold, namely  $1/4 dU/dz^2 > g/rH\rho$  for shear mixing in a radiative zone
